

Communication

People share information and ideas with other people. People express their feelings to other people. Sharing ideas and expressing your feelings is called communication.

How do people communicate? People use language to communicate. They write letters to other people. They send email to other people. They talk on the phone. They talk face-to-face.

People also use their body to communicate. They wave their hands to say hello. They smile to show they are happy. They frown to show they are angry.

There are many ways to communicate. People communicate through printed media such as newspapers, books, and magazines. People communicate through electronic media such as radio, TV, and the internet.

